

Change report for Hants Notables List Issue 23

Martin Rand, December 2025

Notes

The main driver for this issue of the Hampshire Notables List is the publication of the 4th edition of the GB Red List for vascular plants (Stroh et al. (2025)¹). At the same time the opportunity has been taken to review all other statistics and criteria and bring them up to date.

National Criteria

The GB Red List review has not yet been accompanied by a review of the England-only Red List. No doubt some of the England-only assessments will also shift, probably mostly in line but perhaps some in a different direction. However it was thought better to make the update now and revise it again later. As before, the more serious threat category from the two assessments is taken into account.

Species for which the number of hectad records for Great Britain in the period is between 101 and 250 are now labelled “NU – Uncommon”. This is in line with the ‘R’ category in Stace (2019)², although the assessments have been taken from number of hectad records in the BSBI Distribution Database (DDb) rather than the labels in Stace. This category is intended for information only, and taxa where this would otherwise be the only basis for inclusion in the list have been excluded.

Other Changes

As part of an ongoing review of critical genera, many Taraxacum species have been put onto the list, adding to those that are red-listed. The problem with assessing critical species is, of course, that they are sparsely recorded and their actual rarity is difficult to assess merely from figures on the DDb. Species which have low hectad counts on the DDb but are described as “Common” or “Frequent” in Richards (2021)³ have been excluded, as are those that are introduced or dubiously native. Species that are indicators of valued habitat have been given “6A” status; while it is unlikely that field surveyors will record these during a site assessment, if they are recorded on the DDb and have been verified by John Richards they can contribute to an assessment.

“Last” [year recorded] has been updated where necessary on all taxa on the list, but this has not been logged as part of the change record of retained species below.
