Archaeophyte

Now reduced more or less to the status of a casual. There are further records from the mid 19th century until the 1960s near Christchurch and across a swathe of country from Romsey to Southwick; Hengistbury (SZ19), Wick (SU10), Hurn Forest area (SU10A), Abbotswood (SU32R), Kings Somborne area (SU33Q), Eastleigh area (SU41P), Colden Common (SU42V), Twyford (SU42X), Swanwick (SU50E), Fareham (SU50T), Wymering (SU60N), Southwick (SU60P), and Soberton (SU61I). Recent recording is complicated by the occurrence of the similar introduced species Anthemis austriaca, which is a constituent of 'wild flower' seed mixes.

Archaeophyte

Like many other arable wild-flowers it now rarely persists for more than a year or two at any site. As in VC11, the recent introduction of A. austriaca in seed mixes has complicated recording and some plants initially recorded as A. arvensis have proved to be the impostor. Careful examination of the achenes is required to distinguish these two species.
